HOLD NEGRO FOR THE GRAND JURY

This morning in police court before Judge Schirlick, William Johnson, 45 years old, a negro held on a charge of robbery, waived examination and was held to await the action of the next grand jury. Owing to the seriousness of the charge bail was fixed at $1,000. As Johnson had no funds or friends to furnish the amount of the bail he will have to remain in the county jail until the grand jury considers his case.

Johnson is the negro who last week snatched a purse from Mrs. George Ramming of Hasbrouck avenue on lower Broadway and was caught by two young men and turned over to the police. Johnson says that he is married and has three children. He claimed at the time he was arrested that he had been without work and owed two months house rent, and those facts rendered him despicable.

Anthony Beng of Connelly was arrested by Officer Font this morning on a charge of driving to the left of a police standard on North Front street near Wall street. He pleaded guilty and was fined $3 by Judge Schirich.

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES

THE LAMARCA CHURCH

The annual Christmas exercises of the main Sunday school of St. James's Methodist Episcopal Church were held on Wednesday evening. The room was decorated with green and red, and there was the largest Christmas tree probably that has

The music by the school and rendered by the orchestra was fine. E. Kearney, leading the singing, Miss Margaret Burke, home for the holidays, favored the committee with a group of three songs, which she rendered with fine effect, showing the result of careful training. She was enthusiastically encored.

Then came a series of "living pictures" which were evidently appreciated, judging from the hearty applause. Some of these were painted by the children of the Church.

was season, and some most amusing. The art catalog, which described each picture, was read by the pastor, Dr. Narayanaiah, and this created much laughter, especially the references to the artists, to say nothing of the subjects.

The Santa Claus was superb. His program kept the audience in constant laughter, while some of his local "blitz" were most clever. All will vote to have Mr. Santa return next year.

Mrs. E. L. Angle was in charge of the committee on arrangements. A very liberal offering for the pool was taken, which will be divided between New York and the children of foreign lands. Cake and ice cream

Thursday at noon, a merry party of ex-service men enjoyed the cordial and generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. McHugh of O'Reilly street, at the Christmas dinner to the boys being given in memory of their two gold star sons. While the convalescent men at Dr. Downer's at Woodstock were all invited to the able to accept the invitation: E. M. Schonberg, William T. Ward, Ed. Ward Towne, L. B. Ryerson and Albert Krims. During the serving of the dinner, which included soup, chicken with cream gravy, creamed mashed potatoes, peas, cranberries, cream and cake, fruit and nuts, etc. Al King and Mr. Bott entertained the guests with songs and piano music.

Then each guest of honor received a box of candy and a box of cigarettes. After doing full justice to the delicious and sumptuous dinner prepared by Mrs. McHugh, the boys were taken to the movies as the guests of Manager Gladdersleeve and afterward through the courtesy of the K. of C. were taken back to Woodstock, S. Cohen's Sons having sent a car to bring the ex-servicemen to town in the forenoon.

And previous to this happy occasion, each of the ex-service men at Woodstock was sent a generous Christmas package, the gifts and Christmas cheer being provided jointly by the committee of ladies of Kingston of which Miss Haldane is chairman, the Red Cross and the Woman's Auxilliary of the American Legion.

Those present at the dinner

Thursday, in addition to the guests of honor, were Miss Haldane, Miss Helen Westbrook, Mrs. T. J. Hickey, Mrs. Greaver, Mrs. Charles DeWitt and the genial host and hostess and their remaining son.

FOR WINTER WEAR

New Fashions Have Been Absorbed for the Season.

Exaggerations Are Subdued and Simplified, Making into Pleasing and Artistic Types.

All the new influences toward winter fashions have now been absorbed and become parts of the composite 1921 style. Paris writes a fashion authority is making and wearing its mid-season clothes. It is surprising to see how subdued and simplified all of the exaggerations have become.

One of the Latest Paris Suits.

They have melted into the general outline in a way so artistic that they leave one wondering just where they started or whether they have not always belonged in the composition.

A Lanvin suit shows the development of the suit and the direction in which its cut is tending. After the manner of the straight-lined gowns, the coat has that fullness at the hips which gives it a silhouette that is just a bit wider than those which have been accustomed to see. And the waistline is only a trifle lower than a normal one. Even about the skirt there is not length enough to make it so decidedly different that it need require an effort to accept it after what we have been having.

Some fashion experts think that the suit will be one of the popular spring notes. It has been so completely disregarded this winter as anything resembling dress wear that we will be in a condition to welcome it back, should the ways of fashion turn in that direction. This new suit promises to be of tweed, but of the finer, more delicate fabric, as exemplified by this example of Lanvin's, made of beige velours de laine, in a very soft, pliable quality.

TO MAKE PRETTY LAMP SHADE

Wire Frame Should Be Covered With Soft Silk; Chinese Embroidery Is Needed.

A beautiful lamp shade, simple of construction, can be made by any woman who enjoys making lovely things for the home. The wire frame is prettily covered with soft, old gold silk—three thicknesses of the thin China silk is sufficient. To give a particularly soft and rosy light make the middle thickness of rose colored silk. The shade will then give an old gold appearance, but the light will be slightly modified by the layer of rose colored silk. Then on the shade are placed four lengths of narrow Chinese embroidery—a little over an inch wide. It is that sort of strip embroidery done on silk, with the edges turned in, worked in blue and white and gold. These strips are caught at the top of the shade under the gilt binding and at the bottom they are bound in a point with gilt braid and end in tassels.

SACHET CASE IS NICE GIFT

Dainty Article Suitable for Christmas Season May Be Pinned to Lining of the Hat.

A set of sachet cases that may be slipped into the lining of a dainty frock, or pinned, by its accompanying tiny gold safety pin, to the lining of the dainty girl's hat, are always acceptable accessories.

Varying shades, such as violet, green, salmon, blue and lemon, make a dainty combination of colors to begin with. Small ends of ribbon may be utilized for their making or odd bits of satin. The ribbon is folded once, to form a rectangle about three inches in length, and stitched together at the sides. A strip of flat wadding, is sprinkled with the sachet powder, inserted into the flat ribbon case and the top stitched close with very small silk stitches. A tiny gold safety-pin may be caught into the top of each so that the little sachet case is ready for wardrobe use at once.

The Mark of Familiarity.
The eight-year-old son of a North Carolina family was showing an animal back to his little four-year-old brother. Coming to the picture of a reindeer, with his red-nosed head, he said: "Now, baby, you can always tell a reindeer by the kind of hoofs it wears."—Indianapolis News.

MYSTERY OF MOUNT EVEREST

Finding by Explorers of Imprint of Human Foot on Mountain Given Various Explanations.

The progress of the Royal Geographical Society's expedition to Mount Everest, under the leadership of Col. Howard Bury, was watched with keen interest by scientists, especially at the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, to which the spoils were to have been brought for study and classification on the return of the party.

One statement in a dispatch received from Colonel Bury excited special curiosity, and it is hoped that this will be satisfied by further discoveries in the course of the expedition.

"Even at these heights (more than 20,000 feet)," writes Colonel Bury, "there were curious tracks in the snow. We distinguished hairs and fox tracks; but one mark, like that of a human foot, was most puzzling. The guides assured me that it was the track of a wild, hairy man, and that these men were occasionally to be found in the wildest and most inaccessible mountains."

Naturalists here are by no means prepared to scout the idea of a human race living at such an altitude. The probability is, however, that the supposed "wild, hairy man" is in reality a baboon, known as a Macaque, which is known to live at great heights on the Himalayas, and the footprint would be very similar to the human foot.

PARIS PLAGUED BY WILD CATS

Really Serious Situation Caused by Hundreds of the Animals Infesting Bois de Boulogne.

Hundreds of wild cats ranging from the Bois de Boulogne, Paris, and actually proving a menace to passable pedestrians, may sound like an excess of imagination, but it is really a fact. Moreover, their numbers have provoked a conflict between the Society for the Protection of Animals and the Bird Lovers' society, the latter declaring the wild felines must be shot by police agents, while the former is sist that the police have no right to capture them by any other means than box traps. The cats, however, refuse to enter the boxes, and are so enraged by the continual attempts to lure them into nets that they now show fight whenever nurses or children approach during their morning strolls. The Seine prefecture is taking the problem so seriously that a special committee has been appointed to investigate, and is preparing a report to show that unless the cats can be ousted from the city's biggest playground the succeeding litters of kittens will be more savage than their parents and the Bois de Boulogne will become as dangerous for humans as some of the forests in northern Russia.

Color Revived.

If magenta is to be the new fashionable color, it will be the return to favor of the crimson-purple over which Europe went mad 60 years ago, observes a correspondent. It is dated by its name, for in 1860 the French and Piedmontese under Napoleon defeated the Austrians among the rice fields and vineyards of Magenta, near Milan. A crimson-purple aniline dye being discovered about the time, it was named after the famous victory, which everybody has now forgotten, though the color is to be revived. Magenta was then the very acme of beauty. But its glory soon faded, and Charles Reade, the novelist, wrote of his villain, "He wore a magenta tie that gave Zoe a pain in the eye," while Barrie in "Margaret Ogilvy" epitomized the age of a heroine in the fact that she wore a magenta frock.

Women in British Commons.

Lady Astor no longer occupies the proud position of being the only woman member of the British house of commons, for Mrs. Wintingham, who was elected to succeed her husband in the representation of Louth, has taken her seat. They differ in this important political respect—while Lady Astor is a devoted follower of the coalition, Mrs. Wintingham is one of the Free Liberals, who acknowledge the lead of Mr. Asquith. The two women members share the same private room at the house; they drive alike in pairs dark workday clothes; but their seats in the house are not together. Lady Astor sits in the second row immediately behind Lord Robert Cecil; Mrs. Wintingham sits two rows farther behind—Christian Science Monitor.

The Benefit of the Doubt.

"Professor Diggs' pet name for Mrs. Diggs is 'Rabbit'." "She weighs around 200 pounds, 'Rabbit'?" "Ha." "The professor lives in the past. In prehistoric times rabbits may have reached that size."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Not Such a Bad Mistake.

A farmer applied for $1,000 insurance on corn that had been stored in his barn. The application was made out as the farmer instructed. Through a clerical error the policy was returned read: "$1,000 on coal and other fuels when stored in building used as a private barn."

Benefits Forgotten.

An ounce of hard luck will cause the average man immediately to forget a pound of good fortune.

Why Father Smiled.

"Mamma, isn't it awful to have to keep quiet for two hours in Sunday school?" "Yes, dear, I suppose it is." "Is that why you don't go to Sunday school, mamma?"—Boston Transcript.

Unique Marker in Maine.

Within ten minutes' automobile ride from Eastport, Me., erected on the side of the country road at North Perry, is a unique granite marker indicating the halfway distance between the equator and the North pole, having been erected some years ago by government officials who enjoyed summer vacations in this frontier section, close to the banks of the border river, St. Croix, and within a mile of the Dominion shores. The stone would not be observed by many unless the spot were known.

Its Kind.

"The desire for a motorcar appears to be insatiable with the majority of people." "Yes, naturally, it is insatiable."

ART IS GIVING UP GREENWICH

Bohemians Exploited by Realtors
Are Forced to Move.

VILLAGE RENTS GO SKYWARD

Studios Are More Numerous Than Ever, but Artists Are Departing in Haste Because They Can No Longer Afford It—Wealthy, Lured by Artistic Atmosphere, Are Invading the Famous New York District—Make
No More Repairs.

Art is leaving Greenwich Village in haste this year. Studios with huge north windows and facades trimmed with old rose and pea green paint are more numerous than ever, but the artists are departing, not because they love the village less but because they can no longer afford it. Before the invasion of the returning wealthy bourgeoisie, who once more choose to reside in the vicinity of Washington square, the artist must retreat—but where?

This is what they themselves ask you, with a rather desperate air.
Where, indeed, can they find an inexpensive, down-at-the-heels neighborhood into which they can infuse their own careless and artistic atmosphere without attracting a pursuing mob of rich, would-be bohemians? For, like Mrs. Vanderbilt, the artists of Manhattan suffer from too-great popularity.
As soon as they move into a locality,
get their easels and smocks unpacked,
let their beards grow, put antique brass knockers on their front doors and pink borders around their windows, Wall street brokers follow suit and rents rise.

Rich Deserted the Village.
The rich grew weary and deserted Greenwich Village more than half a century ago. Their great estates gave place to rows of mid-Victorian dwellings, owned and occupied by respectable merchant families. When the elevated trains started coming down Sixth avenue as far as Bleecker street, with business in their wake, the merchant families moved on. Clerks and small retailers took over their houses until in time the immigrants came and crowded them out. The neighborhood had set in for a period of rapid decline such as that which destroyed the once-lovely Third avenue, and property owners of the district had resigned themselves to great pecuniary loss
when suddenly New York artists discovered the possibilities of Washington square.

They entered and took possession of the district, ousting the immigrants, remodeling the old-fashioned houses and stables, lending a picturesque enchantment to dingy garrets and basements and encouraging the establishment of cafes and boarding houses catering to artistic taste. For several years Greenwich Village really contained an art colony of genuine distinction. Then it became famous.
People spoke of it as the Latin quarter of America and as such it began to have enormous attractions for the curious.

Many astute persons who had settled in the neighborhood to study art now decided that it would be much more profitable to open restaurants and so-called art shops. Others went quietly about buying leases. Some of these were uptown real estate brokers, who said their plans with deep sagacity.
They kept rents very low to attract the artists, who unsuspectingly set to work remodeling and decorating the dilapidated homes they had leased.
Then at the end of a year the landlords rented the premises at greatly increased prices to uptown businessmen.

Atmosphere Is Expensive.

Under this system, which has enriched so many landlords during the past five years, true art could not survive. Only rich and successful artists can now afford to live in the village, which has become one of the highest priced sections of the city.
Try hunting an apartment there and you will soon find out for yourself.
Not a single basement or garret, however mean and inartistic, is to be had for less than $75 a month. Ten years ago when the village was at the height of its artistic glory, the best floor in Washington square south could be rented for $40 a month, while a room overlooking the park cost $5. Today a room without a private bath (and also usually without steam heat or electricity) rents for $70 a month and a whole floor (two rooms) will cost you $180.

The picturesque little stables in Washington square, which once rented for $80 and $40 a month, now bring $4,000 a year in addition to the cost of necessary repairs, which must be made by the tenant.

A well-known painter rented one of these places for $2,000 four years ago.
He steepled it, installed new plumbing, built a new fireplace and made other costly repairs, with the result that the following year his rental was raised to $3,000. He paid the increase and the following year his landlord attempted to collect $5,000 for the place.
Make No More Repairs.

Now that the influx of business people from uptown shows signs of being permanent, however, the landlords have ceased bemoaning about repairs.
Instead, they actually call attention to dampness as a mark of atmosphere.
"Yes, it is a trifle dark," a real estate agent will say to a broad street broker, who is looking at an apartment, "but very quiet, don't you think? No blatant electric bulbs or steam radiators or other modern attractions. You will find a gas heater quite warm, and it throws such delightful shadows on the wall. The woodwork shadings?
Well, you could have it done if you like, but this mellow shade of white is admired down here. Perhaps you also dislike the wallpaper; some people of course, do not care for such an intricate design."

"On the contrary, it was the wall paper that attracted me," says the broker, anxious to show that he knows something about art. "That, and the fireplace. I grew quite accustomed to fireplaces in England. How much is the rent—$150? Well, wrap it up and I'll take it along."

Some of the real estate agents, being art students on the side, are expert creators of atmosphere. They find artistic merits in every glaring defect and so dazzle the prospective tenant by descriptions of bohemian life in the village that he is willing to sacrifice all comfort in order to live within the charmed circle. "No, this room does not get the sun," the agent will explain with patient patronage, "but the marvelous reflection of the sun so necessary to artists." (He looks around hurriedly searching for some good points to play up, but sees nothing but rusty fixtures, cobwebs and dirt.
Nevertheless, his kind patronizing manner does not desert him.) "The charm of this particular house," he continues, "is its privacy and freedom. There is only one apartment to a floor, so that one is never disturbed by the proximity of neighbors. My friend, so and so (you may have heard of him in the village) particularly admires the Gothic appearance of this building."

When Wreck Is Profitable.
This is a small town woman, who had long revered the name of Greenwich Village, decided to buy a house
there. Her idea, like that of the first art colonists years ago, was to secure a disputed place for a small amount of money and remodel it to suit herself. After searching throughout the district, she came upon precisely the kind of house she was looking for in Washington Square South. To her practical middle western eye, the place seemed to be rapidly falling to pieces.
It sagged imply toward the east, and its front steps looked as if they had been used for artillery practice.

"No one has lived there for years," she thought and hurried to the nearest real estate office.
"That house is not for sale," the real estate clerk told her, "but if it were it would cost you $50,000."

"You cannot know the one I mean," persisted the woman. "I am referring to — which would have to be extensively repaired before any one could live in it. Surely it can't be worth even half of $50,000."

"But it is," said the clerk, laughing. "And the only reason it is not for sale is that the landlord can make more money out of it renting it out in apartments. If you will go back and examine the place closely, madam, you will see that there are tenants living on every floor."

With the village growing less artistic and more expensive every day, the artists are scattering in all directions.
A small colony settled in the Old Chelsea section, but is now being outcast by the same clever real estate tactics. Others have fled the city altogether and have taken refuge in Brooklyn and in outlying suburbs. A large group has taken up its abode in the former aristocratic Brooklyn Heights, but with no faith in the permanency of their security. The heights so closely resemble Greenwich Village in every way that it is unreasonable to suppose a Latin quarter established on their old fashioned soil would long escape the attention of commercial interests. The same is probably true of the colony near Spuyten Duyvil, Bronxville and New Rochelle shelter many distinguished artists, but there has been no attempt to establish an art quarter in either suburb.

In fact, the hope of founding another Greenwich Village in some other section grows dimmer and dimmer.
Why, the artists ask you, "would he use? We would only be pursued. The only thing that can help

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Bring a Story
 Of how Jim got on a job and why
 he got off it again.

There were flavorings of every sort in Jim's kit. Onion, celery, vanilla, checkerberry, all kinds packed in tubes, and guaranteed to be stronger and more satisfactory than any kind of extract made.

Of course, whatever article Jim sold, he was told that it was better than any other brand, according to the employer's right. That was understood. And yet, Jim couldn't help feeling that those tubes of flavoring would prove to be easy sellers.

He changed his territory, canvassing a different section of the city from the one he had travelled, selling books, the day before. The extracts sold fairly well. It was a simple matter to separate the housewives from quarters than from larger amounts. His day's work paid fairly well, although he figured that if he didn't earn a good day's pay, he would soon have to go barefoot through the city. And not only barefoot, but pantsless also.

Therein hangs a tale. The white-haired woman in the comfortable cottage became very much interested in Jim's flavorings. She wanted to try both the almond and the ginger but forty-eight cents was the sum total of her change.

"That's all right," assured Jim. "I guess you can have two tubes for forty-eight."

"I've just made a fresh batch of doughnuts," returned the old lady. "Wouldn't you like to sample one?"

Jim sat down in the spotless kitchen, and ate three doughnuts, washed down by two glasses of sweet cider. The hostess chatted hospitably by his side, making him feel very much at home.

But work was work, and he suddenly remembered that he was out to sell extracts, not visit. "You've been mighty good to me," said Jim. "I'd like to do something for you, just by way of a thank you."

"Well, you might put out a barrel of ashes and place a shovel of coal on the furnace, if you don't mind," suggested the woman. "I hate to ask you, but you offered—"

"That's all right, I'm only too glad. Is this the way to the cellar?" She nodded and Jim hurried down the stairs. It was dark below, and he paused until his eyes became accustomed to the dark. He discerned the barrels and the furnace, and started across to them. All at once a sharp bark broke the stillness; a scrambling of feet, and a leap into the air of a dog whose sharp teeth gripped Jim's trousers seat with a vicious snap.

It had all happened so suddenly that Jim was struck dumb. He struggled and swayed back and forth, trying to loosen the dog's grip,—but in vain. He heard the cloth of his trousers ripping, and realized what it would mean if the teeth reached into the skin.

"Hey you, upstairs," he shrieked, "call your blooming pup off!" Jim heard the patter of feet overhead, and no moment too soon, the protesting voice of the pup's mistress. Prince loosened his grip, and skulked into the corner.

Half an hour later, Jim left the house. He had waited while the woman had sewed a patch on his best-kept-meeting trousers, and had received the rest of his lunch, for his pains.

quested to bring a present; the recipient of which he would not know, so that there was considerable amusement when the gifts were handed about. The Christmas tree, which had fruited for the children and thus another red-letter day for Hurley school.

Charles A. Snyder, John Brink the school trustee and the Rev. Mr. French, all made interesting addresses pertinent to the occasion.

The Ostrander family spent Christmas in Ellenville.

The cantata of "The Shepherd's Story" at our village church on Sunday evening was a most beautiful as well as decided presentation. As is known, there is a large number of musical selections in piece, while the recitation and dialogue keep up the running interest in the story. There was a large audience present, including many away from outside of the village. Everyone speaks words of praise of this presentation, which reflects great efforts of those in charge and to whom large merits of thanks are due.

The annual Christmas exercises will be held on Friday evening. On Saturday night will be held a "watch night service." There will be a social with games and a "surprise" from 8 to 11 p. m. Also a service by candle light from 11 to 12. This service will be held in the main body of the church and will be a very interesting service. Every one attending is expected to bring a candle.

Alligerville, Dec. 29.—Virgil DeWitt, who is home from college for his holiday vacation, is spending a few days with relatives in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward DeWitt of Jersey City spent Christmas at home.

The day school, under the direction of their teacher, gave a very interesting entertainment in the church hall Saturday night. After the entertainment a box lunch was served, also an abundance of cakes and ice cream. A prize was given the best speaker. This the judges awarded to Master John R. Lawrence.

Mr. and Mrs. Christiana have returned from Kingston, bringing their granddaughter, Miss Charlotte Sanders with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brooks spent Sunday in Kingston.

BIGGEST SALE OF PULP WOOD BY U. S.

Two Billion Feet of Alaskan Timber on Block; Sale Period 30 Years.

Two billion feet of Alaskan pulp wood, the largest amount of national forest timber ever offered for sale, is described in a prospectus recently issued by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The timber is within the Tongass National forest, on the west side of Admiralty island, and covers about 80,000 acres with a frontage of forty-eight miles on navigable water and twenty-four miles by boat from Juneau and 900 miles from Seattle. Four-fifths of the timber is Western hemlock and one-fifth Sitka spruce, both of which make excellent grades of paper, as has been demonstrated by the mills of Oregon and British Columbia.

The sale period will be thirty years and a large plant will be required to utilize all the timber within that time. The sales contract requires that a pulp manufacturing plant of not less than 100 tons daily capacity shall be established in Alaska by the purchaser within three years. This section of Alaska has many unappropriated power sites of suitable capacity for large pulp and paper plants.

The need of developing our pulp industry is emphasized by forestry experts, who point out that although prior to 1900 all the paper consumed in this country was manufactured here, in 1920 two-thirds of the newspaper in the United States was made from timber grown on foreign soil. Reduced to dollars and cents this represents an annual payment of $191,000,000 for pulp wood, wood pulp and paper which this country has been obliged to import due to lack of raw material available to existing pulp mills. A partial solution of this problem, foresters say, lies in establishing pulp mills in Alaska, where there is now a large supply of spruce and hemlock and where wood can be grown at a rate sufficient to furnish indefinitely one-third of the present American newspaper requirements.

The LOWER COLORADO

Sahara-Like Sand Dunes of Colorado Desert in California.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado, with its stupendous scenic effects, its beauty and its grandeur, is little calculated to raise practical thoughts in the minds of most of its beholders. But anyone with a touch of the engineer in his makeup who gazes into this great chasm must marvel at the tremendous energy that has been exerted by running water in carving its way more than a mile in depth through rocks of various degrees of hardness. And into his mind, as his eye gazes the vast canyon, is sure to come the question: What has become of the billions of cubic yards of material that once filled this enormous pit? The lower Colorado country—a region of fascination despite its deserts and marshes, its mud volcanoes and shifting sand-dunes—is the answer; for it is truly the creature of the river, built from the countless tiny grains of sand and silt that its waters have brought down through the centuries.

The mouth of the Colorado is one of the least-known regions of North America. Only 60 miles to the north in an air line the Mexican town of Yuma has existed for the better part of a century, and through it passes one of the principal transcontinental railroads of the United States; while little more than a hundred miles to the west lies the rich valley of southern California and the coast cities with teeming populations.

Its Mouth is in Mexico.

There are physical difficulties in reaching the mouth of the Colorado; but the chief impediment is an imaginary line—the Mexican border. For while the Colorado is essentially a river of the United States, and traverses its soil for some nineteen-twentieths of its length, for the last 75 miles before it reaches the sea its banks are formed by Mexican territory. And to add to the isolation the sea which the Colorado reaches is the long narrow Gulf of California, whose northern end, into which the Colorado pours, is bounded by desert sands and rocky, largely barren mountains. For 200 miles or more below the mouth of the Colorado, the shores of the gulf form a desolate region, almost the only permanent inhabitants of which are half-civilized Indians.

The Colorado may be compared in one way to the Nile, since for hundreds of miles both flow through deserts, regions practically without tributaries. Above Yuma, before reclamation work was undertaken, the suddenness with which one traveling in the desert would stumble upon the river at almost any point along its course was a continuous source of wonder.

One of the striking features of the lower Colorado country is just northwest of the river, opposite Yuma, where is to be found one of America's closest approaches toward duplicating the Sahara. This stretch of country is given over to dunes built of wind-swept sands brought down by the river and washed by the rare torrential rains from the adjacent hills. A series of long, sinuous ridges with sharp crests, constantly traveling back and forth as the wind shifts their tiny mounds, this dazzling waste of sand needs only a camel on some summit to have all the atmosphere of the Sahara.

Not only has the Colorado created deserts; it has made what may be considered their opposites, marshes, as well. Below Yuma, where the river emerges from the rough country, the Colorado delta stretches away to the sea, almost entirely in Mexico. The stream does not flow in one channel on this last lap of its journey, but divides into numerous branches and spreads over a wide, nearly level area, especially in flood season. Between the streamlets are extensive marshes grown up in cat-tails, with willows lining the channels. Halfway to the sea the many streams meet in a lake which serves as a settling basin. There, then, is being deposited much of the solid material now washed from the upper Colorado; and while the streams which enter the lake are dark and muddy, those which flow out are almost clear.

Queer Mud Volcanoes.

On the edge of this lake are numerous mud volcanoes, small mounds which appear from a distance like roughly conical shocks of hay. From their craters boils soft, scalding hot mud, while streams and sulphurous gases escape in hissing jets, leaving orange-yellow crystals around the vents and scattering golden dust over the slopes of the mounds. Similar volcanic activity occurs a few miles north of the United States line. One theory is that the tremendous pressure generated on the underlying strata by the deposits thousands of feet thick which the Colorado has laid down through the ages has caused the heat which shows itself in the development of the mud vents.

The Colorado has been a destroyer on a grand scale, and a creator as well of strange geographic regions and forms. But one of its most significant achievements has been in the economic sphere—the addition of hundreds of millions of dollars of value to the country. In this accomplishment the labors of the river for unnumbered centuries must needs be supplemented by brief, but all-important labors of man.

Ages ago the Gulf of California thrust a long narrow arm more than 150 miles into the interior of North America, perhaps 100 miles above the present United States border. Into the side of this deep gulf the Colorado emptied near the present site of Yuma.

Blindly the river carried the sands torn from the Grand Canyon and the upper reaches of its streams and dropped them into the gulf. Cable miles were thrown into the depression and steadily a bar was built out into the salt water. Eventually the bar was built above sea level entirely across the gulf and became a mighty dyke, damming it. At first a fresh or brackish lake existed to the north of this dyke, while the Colorado alternately fed it and discharged southward into the shortened gulf. But eventually the river took a more or less permanent course to the south; and the lake, no longer fed, and bathed by the intense sunshine and dry air of the southwest, evaporated. When this country was first explored by the Spanish pioneers, a half century after Columbus discovered America, this old lake bed, with its deepest point more than 250 feet below sea level, was one of the hottest, driest, most desolate regions of the North American continent—the Colorado desert.

Reclaiming a Fertile Desert.

And so it continued during the exploration and settlement of the West by Americans. Many of the pioneers bound for the California gold fields in the rush of '49 passed this way, and found the great depression of the Colorado desert the most forbidding stretch of their journey. Where anything grew it was typical desert vegetation—cacti, grease-wood, an occasional desert palm. But much of it was dry, powdery soil devoid of all vegetation. The temperature was one of the highest on the globe, sometimes reaching 130 degrees Fahrenheit.

But though the region was a desert because of the lack of moisture, its soil was a wonderful rich silt, washed down by the Colorado, as potentially productive as the soil of the famous delta of the Nile. A few engineers recognized this and saw that since the region lay below the level of the Colorado river its irrigation would be a relatively simple matter. Water was first taken by canal to the desert in 1901, and wherever it was led the desert character disappeared. Alfalfa and other crops quickly covered the one-time dead, seared soil with a sheet of green, while trees sprang up beside the water courses.

The one-time Colorado desert has disappeared to be replaced by the Imperial valley, one of the most remarkable agricultural regions of the United States. Where a score of years ago the Colorado desert did not produce a single dollar's worth of crops, the produce of the transformed Imperial valley now represents interest on approximately half a billion dollars. And the muddy Colorado can be given, fundamentally, all the credit. The Imperial valley might, in truth, be termed a "by-product" of that great scenic wonder, the Grand Canyon. The river is doubly the valley's creator. It built up the rich soil from the materials it gouged out in making the canyon, and it brings throughout the year the life-giving water that on the canvas of the Southwest has erased a desert and drawn in an agricultural wonderland.

Everybody knows that the Freeman's Cost-a-Word ads. bring quick results. Try them.

"Economy no more means saving money than it means spending money; it means administration of a house; its stewardship; spending, or saving, whether money or time, or anything else, to the best possible advantage."

Ruskin has thus epitomized one of the most important elements of true thrift. It is unfortunate that in many minds thrift is associated with miserliness and it is equally deplorable that this false and harmful conception of thrift is often encouraged by well-meaning but illogical persons. Ruskin's analysis places as much importance on correct spending as on correct saving. While he refers in this connection only to the management of the home, the same principle holds good throughout the entire range of personal economics and may be carried into the most profound problems of business or statesmanship.

One frequently hears of the accomplishments of some miserly person, who has succeeded in amassing a certain sum of money after years of hoarding, and these exploits are frequently extolled as worthy examples of thrift. While it is true that saving plays a necessary part in up-building, there can be no real progress where there is not as much careful thought and ingenuity expended on the entire problem of administration.

This fact should be kept in mind particularly by those who are engaged in teaching thrift, whether they are in school work or are in some other position where it is essential that those who depend upon them for guidance are given the correct understanding of these problems of human development. Mere saving will not within itself bring one to that goal of success in life. One must be capable of iron self-discipline in matters of economy, but in order to grow and learn and reach a more worthy position in life, one must exercise an equal amount of willpower and prudence in matters of employment of time and expenditure of money.

Thrift is growth. Any definition which does not embrace the full scope of this principle is false doctrine.

Painting Coffee Beans.

One of the flourishing industries in Rio de Janeiro is that of coffee painting and polishing. The raw coffee beans being tinted, preparatory to shipment to South Africa, where that tint helps to sell the coffee. While the plain black grain is preferred in Brazil, experts say the polishing and painting are not harmful, because all the graphite, ochre and other materials used are disposed of when the berry is roasted.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Fine Buildings in Buenos Aires.

Although the Teatro Colon, Buenos Aires' opera house, is far famed as the largest in the world, the architectural jewel of the city is the magnificent Jockey club, on the Calle Florida, the Fifth avenue of the southern metropolis. Its staircase is wide and pillared, of green marble. The furniture of one of the banqueting rooms was taken over in its entirety from an old French chateau. It has a great fencing hall.

SANTA VISITS R-G-R EMPLOYES

Wednesday evening as the clerks were leaving the R-G-R store, everyone was smiling. Not that this attitude is not generally characteristic of R-G-R employees, but it seemed particularly in evidence on Wednesday evening for then every clerk in their employ received a Christmas bonus of at least ten dollars, and ranging in larger amounts up to $45.

E. O. Rose presented the envelopes to each of the entire force. No one was forgotten. As there are a number of clerks who have been with the R-G-R store for some years, the total amount distributed was in excess of two thousand dollars.

The members of the firm are especially delighted that a prosperous year of rapidly increasing business has enabled them to make this liberal distribution in recognition of the loyal and efficient services of their employees. A member of the firm said: "It is particularly gratifying to hear the many complimentary remarks made by customers even during the holiday rush to the effect that at the R-G-R store clerks were uniformly courteous and helpful to customers. We have endeavored to develop a spirit of team work and pride in our store and its growth and we are happy to give this recognition of the efforts of our co-workers."

HAVES HAD RELATIVES HERE

Charles Haves, who was attacked Tuesday by highwaymen on Vermont avenue, Brooklyn, and when he resisted was shot, dying later in the St. Mary's hospital as a result of the wounds, was a brother of Mrs. Samuel Present and Mrs. J. Lewis of this city. Mr. Haves who was an insurance salesman had been a visitor in Kingston having stopped at the home of Harry Lewis last September while here visiting relatives. Mr. Haves was 54 years old and lived at 334 Glenmore avenue, East New York. He had left his wife and daughter and had started for the home of his son-in-law, Samuel Sloane, at 321 Wyona street, and was in front of 338 Vermont avenue when the highwaymen set upon him. It is thought the robbers followed him for some distance before they stopped him. He resisted and was shot. The men ran away without securing any valuables. Haves was found by a janitor of a nearby building and later taken to the hospital where he died.

Another theory is advanced by the Brooklyn detectives. They began working on the theory that he had been murdered as a result of some private quarrel. Sloane told reporters that his father-in-law had been threatened.

Kingston relatives had planned to spend New Year at the home of Mr. Haves and had gone to Brooklyn before they learned of his death.

A New Will For a New Year

THAT you "made your will" some time ago should not deter you from bringing it up-to-date. Time alters every man's plans and obligations.

Perhaps your will now reads that your family shall receive outright the money and property you will leave. This was a very common provision only a few years ago.

But in the light of present-day conditions you, like other prudent men, may wish to safeguard your wife and children against financial hazards by re-writing your will, and naming this Company as your trustee.

Your new will can provide that the property be held in trust by this Company during the lifetime of your wife, to go to other beneficiaries thereafter.

It can set apart funds to insure your children's support and education, or to insure that your daughter will always have independent means.

It can provide that your son's portion of the estate be managed for him until he reaches years of business discretion.

These are a few of the possibilities. We shall be pleased to send you a booklet of interesting information about wills and trusts entitled "Safeguarding Your Family's Future," and to discuss with you the business aspects of protecting your family's future.

WHAT DO MEN WANT?

Destruction of Satan and His Empire

In Preparation for the Millions Now Living Who Will Never Die

W. E. Van Amburgh
New York City

THE SCRIPTURES abound in time prophecies indicating when such events as have distressed mankind during the past few years, and the opportunity for oppression, will forever end.

JEHOVAH'S law is inexorable and every inspired revelation of the divine purpose respecting the affairs of the old world, over which HE for a special purpose tolerated Satan to rule, has been fulfilled exactly on time, and the time for the binding of Satan is at hand.

EVERY Bible scholar is aware, whether it is now or a hundred years hence, that mankind will sometime arrive at the end of Satan's reign; when everlasting life on this earth can be his blessed portion instead of death and the tomb as has been the case under Satan's six thousand years of domination and delusion. But just so surely as the scriptures unequivocally testify that Satan's empire will be destroyed, they declare that the end of evil in the earth will not be brought about without a desperate conflict between the mighty, invisible powers of Messiah and Satan.

YOU are involved in the result of Armageddon. If you are interested in your future blessing, that of your loved ones, and of the whole human family, you owe it to yourself to hear this free lecture by

THE OFFICE CAT

In A Small Town Hotel.
I settled me down one evening.
It wasn't so long ago.
For the air was cold and chilly—
The ground all covered with snow.
To sleep the sleep of the weary.
On a bed at the end of the hall.
Where the snow and wind so dreary
Blow in through a hole in the wall.

And I drew the covers around me.
With my knees up under my chin;
From somewhere in the darkness, I couldn't see
Two enemies swiftly stole in.

One approached from the west in silence.
While the other had taken a line
From the pillow, on which I was lying.

To the nose that I always called mine.
Before the first snore I could utter.
They began their awful attack.
The one on my nose made me snort.
ter.

While the other he bit at my back.
I countered, I fenced, I parried.
I scratched and I hammered in rain.

I turned, but never I carried.
For they were back biting again.
As we waged our furious battle.
The covers became disarranged.
My teeth they began to rattle.

While I became greatly dismayed.
In vain I called for assistance.
No light could I find anywhere.
So the noise of my earnest resistance
And chatter—well, quite filled the air.

At last the pillow was taken.
I jumped far out on the floor.
My enemies both were shaken.
So I curled up by the door.

There I shivered away, most demented.
With the pillow thrown over my head.
To awake in the morning contented.
When I found both bugs frozen in bed.

IKE.

Even So, Yea Verily.
Today you kick up the dust at 35 per hour. Tomorrow the Judge gets your "dust"—$25 worth or so.

Not Much Difference.
"Just back from the South Seas?"
"I spent 10 years there," said the Copa King.

"Do the styles in women's clothes shock you since you have come home?"
"On the contrary, they seem familiar."

A determined effort is being made to ban the Ku Klux Klan. The day is past when night hoo was in flower.

They are wearing them flopping around the ankles these days.

What?
Why the four buckle arctics worn by the girls about town since the last snow storm. The girls don the arctics and then do not buckle them, allowing them to flop open.

The style is being termed the rat guard style by the boys about town who served in the navy during the late war. The term rat guard is derived from the fact that when a ship barge in port after an ocean voyage large discs are placed on the barge's side to hold the boat to the dock to prevent rats from the land boarding the ship
by climbing up the ropes.

No matter what term is applied to the unbuckled arctics, however, the girls will persist in wearing 'em that way, and that's all there is to it.

Willing Enough.
A negro strolled into a public library. "Ah want an encyclopedia," he said. "Whose encyclopedia, and what volume?" asked the attendant.
"Ah don't rightly know," was the answer. "It's like dis: Us colored folk done gone organize a library society.
Ah'm on de program for a paper on "Current Events." Ah's jes' like ter kinder read up a bit on de subject."

New York.—That economic conditions in Germany are rapidly improving was the report made by Karl Lang on his arrival to become Charge d'Affaires for that country in Washington. He said: "If they leave us the means to do things Germany will 'come back.' The people want better conditions, but it is hard for them to face the future imposed by the Versailles Treaty. We have been badly hurt by the cutting off of the Eastern provinces, compelling us to go outside for food we formerly supplied ourselves. Germany could not pay the reparations demanded even in the days before the war, let alone now. We have have tried to export goods. Many countries have barred our merchandise. So we bought foreign. That lowered the mark."

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Dec. 30.—The stock market showed an irregular tone at the beginning of business today, featured by an overnight advance of three points in Sears Roebuck on the news of the loan from its president. U. S. Steel gained 3/4 at 82 1/2. Mexican Petroleum was 1/2 lower at 56 1/2. Studebaker after opening at 81 1/2, rose to 82 1/2.

Although there was a good deal of irregularity in the first hour, the tone was strong and the important changes were to higher levels. A good part of business consisted of sales for cash to establish losses.

There was an urgent demand for stocks in the afternoon, sharp gains being made in a number of the active issues. The oil stocks were strong.

MACHINE THAT WILL CATCH YOU IF YOU TELL UNTRUTH

Science has discovered that, although you may be able to tell a lie and keep a straight face, you can't tell a lie and maintain normal vision. That is one of the disclosures that nature has yielded to the new ophthalmology, which is teaching people to throw away their glasses. It has been demonstrated by tests in the laboratory and in private practice, with the aid of the retinoscope.

Phon shows Dr. W. H. Bates, the inventor, demonstrating the retinoscope, with Miss Emily O. Lerman for a subject.

SCARED BY AIRPLANES

Engines used on Them Not Considered Friendly by Cattle.
Nevada cattle have not yet become used to airplanes, which means that the Southern Pacific may be compelled to move its shipping pens at Elko, Nev., whence thousands of head start for market.

The pens are adjacent to the landing field of the United States Air mail service, and the cattle, raised on a plane, go wild when the big flyers come zooming down.

The two-inch planks of which the pens are made are no stronger than are needed to restrain the frantic animals.

KINGSTON NOW IN FIFTH PLACE

By Defeating Amsterdam in A Slow Game in Which Sixty Three Fouls Were Called and Seven Field Baskets Shot—Score 25 to 23.

Seven baskets caged from the floor was the total in Wednesday night's game between Kingston and Amsterdam at the armory, two for the locals and five for the up-staters. Sixty three fouls were called, forty on Amsterdam and twenty three on Kingston. Out of these tries from the fifteen foot mark Kingston shot one more than half, twenty one, a very poor showing. Amsterdam scored thirteen points from the chalk line.

Borgman caged ten fouls out of fourteen attempts and played an excellent game. Out of twelve tries from the penalty line Powers shot four. Knobloch made good his two from the complimentary line and also shot a field. Clinton shot the other field for the locals and made good at his only chance for a one pointer. Artus caged four out of eleven attempts from the chalk line.

Riconda was the big point getter of the evening, shooting a field and making ten from the penalty out of twelve tries, totaling twelve points. Nestor shot a field, and Cosgrove, Kennedy and Steward each shot a field and a foul.

Referee Davey's decisions did not meet with the approval of the fans, and one of the local fans asked him if he was a school teacher. The rules are so strict this season, especially when a man is taking a ball down the floor that is very easy to foul him and the work of the referee has been made much harder.

The few baskets shot from the floor and many from the penalty line is proof enough that the Amsterdam team would foul every time a player would cut in for a field basket and have them try for a one pointer instead of a two pointer. This seems to be the aim of most of the teams in the league this season making foul shooting very essential.

The game was nip and tuck throughout, the first half ending in Kingston's favor 12 to 10, the local team scoring ten fouls out of twenty attempts and Clinton's field basket. Amsterdam shot eight fouls out of eleven attempts and one from the floor.

With a two point lead Borgman started the second half scoring a foul, and Kingston kept this lead if three points until three minutes before the whistle blew ending the game. Cosgrove shot a field and Kennedy a foul, score 23 all Artus, Riconda and Powers missed fouls but Borgman made good, giving the locals a one point lead with one minute to play. Cosgrove missed and Borgman made good another foul ending the game.

POUGHKEEPSIE Y TOOK ALL THREE

Thursday afternoon's games were dropped like hot coals by the local Y. M. C. A. boys in the three game tournament and Poughkeepsie took all three, 31-4, 22-2 and 29-28. In the first two games between the 90 and 110 pound classes the little Poughkeepsie youngsters had affairs pretty much their own way but rough water was encountered when the visiting boys played the unlimited weight class.

The same local Student A unlimited team defeated Fred Dressel's varsity team 35-33 in a rapid game Wednesday afternoon without a great deal of exertion on the part of the arch school players, and representatives are highly elated over their victory.
